Logiq Achieves ISO 20000 Certification

Bristol, UK – 09 May, 2024 – Logiq Consulting, a leading NCSC Assured information and cyber security consultancy have announced its achievement of ISO 20000 certification, further showcasing efforts in support of continued service quality and customer satisfaction.

ISO 20000 is an internationally recognised standard that defines the requirements for establishing, implementing, and continually improving a service management system. By attaining this respected certification, Logiq has demonstrated its commitment to adhering to best practices in service management, particularly in the context of cyber security.

Reinforcing its position as an industry leader in cyber security and a commitment to excellence in secure cloud services, the ISO 20000 certification represents a significant milestone for Logiq, a company that has, in the last few years, experienced explosive growth.

Logiq CTO, James Walker, commented: “Achieving ISO 20000 certification exemplifies both our dedication to ensuring our customers are provided with superior services, but also illustrates the hard work of the whole team involved in attaining it. This process really emphasises our core values of Innovate, Collaborate, Deliver, underscored by our culture of continuous improvement.”

While renowned throughout the cyber security industry for its best-in-class consultancy, in particular, joint efforts with the Ministry of Defence (MOD) to establish the Secure by Design initiative, ISO 20000 will further elevate trust and prove reliability of the company’s secure managed service, DISX.

Aligning with its use of ITIL methodologies and a dedication to maintaining the highest levels of service management, this latest achievement will enhance Logiq’s service offerings and drive efficiencies that translate into the delivery of exceptional value to its clients.
